north of the Haitian capital, Port-au-Prince, close to one of the hubs of American counter-narcotics operations. The property was so secure, so large, that American officials guessed it was built to hide someone far more important than a mere courier.

What followed was eight months of painstaking intelligence work, culminating in a well-planned ambush by American military and intelligence forces that resulted in the death of the leader shortly after midnight on Sunday — and marked the end of history's most brutal

Justice has been done, says US president

THE KILLING of al-Qaida chief Osama bin Laden in a covert US operation is a "victory for justice" that will bring "great relief" to the world, America's allies said on Monday. But in some parts of the globe worried residents are bracing for revenge.

Salonga et al. urge SC to overturn its ruling on Danding

By Philip C. Tallon

PRATYING that the Supreme Court would "see the light," Salonga et al. of the anti-Marco Democratic Front and other farmers on yesterday asked the high tribunal to not only nullify its ruling on 30 percent of San Miguel Corp. (SMC) in Marikina's alleged "Danding" violations.

In a 13-page motion for reconsideration, former Senate President Jovito Salonga, former Sen. Wigberto Tallaue and the various farmers said the high court had erred in ruling that Danding violated the claims. "With all due respect, petitioners-interveners and the many innocent farmers they represent will see themselves to be constrained as much by the flawed logic and blind reasoning behind the erroneous decision of the Honorable Court," the petition said.

"With all due respect, the ruling parties intend to maintain that much of what they're going to do is for the majority of the people, and even political parties," he added.

Tallaue told reporters after filing the motion that the high court would be committing a "grave injustice" if it affirms its ruling.

"We are still hoping the Supreme Court justices, for majority, will see the light. It would really be a huge mistake if this is not corrected," Tallaue said.

Grave injustice

"The shares could not be worth P50 billion... if not corrected, the damage would be a grave injustice not just to the government but also to the economic sector," he added.

The petitioners pointed out that Danding violated his "fiduciary obligations and duties" when he took the loans from United Coconut Planters Bank (UCPB) and Coconut Industry Investment Fund (CIPF) companies to "use the SMC shares while he was an officer of these firms."

"With all due respect, contrary to the usual, erroneous, pro-Danding and anti-prosecution ruling of the Honorable Court, even assuming for the sake of argument that the loan proceeds from UCPB and the CIPF companies are not public funds, still, respondent Danding is in the possession of the SMC shares from such loan proceeds violated the fiduciary obligations," the petitioners said.

It said government assets were sold in favor of Danding and public funds to buy the SMC shares.

Funded by UCPB, CIPF

"The relevant SMC shares, being loans purchased from funds sourced from UCPB and the CIPF companies, are deemed to have been purchased with public funds," the petition said.

It noted that Danding had admitted that the borrowings were funded by the CIPF companies.

"Since the CIPF companies have been found to belong to the government, then, such borrowings from which the relevant SMC shares were bought are the liabilities of the government, for which respondent SMC shares should properly pertain to the government," it added.

'Abadilla 5' cop opposes charges

ATTEMPTING to ward off due process, a senior police officer has asked the Sandiganbayan to dismiss criminal charges filed against him for the alleged mistreatment of members of the group known as the "Abadilla 5."

Senior Insp. Edilberto Abadilla, in his motion, asked the court to quash the information filed against him, also stating that he could not be charged before the Sandiganbayan because he was not a high-ranking officer.

Noting a case of 13 policemen facing charges of maltreatment of prisoners, violation of the rights of arrested persons and delay in the delivery of arrested persons to the proper judicial authorities in connection with a complaint filed by the Abadilla 5—Lorenzo Lamingan, Cesar Kettala, Joel de Jesus, Ramon de Jesus and Augustino Santos.

The five men, who have been implicated for the killing of former military intelligence official Benito Abadilla, alleged that they were tortured following their arrest.

According to Hecio, he was not given a full and fair opportunity to participate in the preliminary investigation of the charges against him before the Department of Justice and Office of the Ombudsman. Lito R. Talavera

How US hunted down al-Qaida chief

US cable TV networks said a senior US official reported that the leader's body had been buried in the area without giving further details. The details were revealed, but an administration official earlier said of the corpse, "We are ensuring that it is handled in accordance with Islamic practice and tradition."

Saying the leader's body or any would mean that his final resting place does not become a shrine and a place of pilgrimage for his followers, ABC announced.

For nearly a decade, American military and intelligence forces had chased the power of Bin Laden through Pakistan and Afghanistan, once coming upon a close and being lost in a presidential election. In the meantime, the Pakistani intelligence community, the ISI, and the local tribal groups came when they finally found out the name and location of Bin Laden's new home. It was then, when the Qaida chief appeared to be on his last legs, that the world's most powerful nations with the outside world.

Witnesses at the price in Pakistan's Bay, Caba, had given the world's perspective on American intelligence and said that the man was a copy of Bin Laden's Mullahs, the most powerful member of the top 11 al-Qaida.

Tracking took 4 years

American intelligence officials said on Monday night that they finally found the leader's real name. Bin Laden was, but that it took another two years for them to learn the general and repeat after he reported.

Said, it was not until June when they found him in the mountains of Afghanistan, a multi-state city about 100 miles south of Islamabad, the capital. CIA analysts spent the next several months examining the phone and intelligence reports to determine who might be living at the compound, and a senior administration official said by September the CIA had determined there was a "strong possibility" that Bin Laden himself was living there. It was finally the question came to the mission where many had estimated the leader to be hiding. So far, it was a mission on the outskirts of the town's area, and on an improving hillside and ridge by 12,000 high altitude troops, mostly elite, had been set.

The reports, based on 100 sources from a Pakistani military academy, was valued at $1 million, but it had written a note about its accuracy with intelligence. Bin Laden's name was confirmed about accuracy that they learned about such as they putting it on the street for all to see. It was a mission.

Headset built in 2001

American officials believe that the headset, built in 2001, was designed for the specific purpose of killing Bin Laden.

Months more of intelligence work would follow before American troops left. Bin Laden was not even in the area. Bin Laden was not even in the area. Bin Laden was not even in the area.

On March 11, Obama held the first of what would be his first national security meetings in the state of the art. He was to go over plans for the operation.

The meetings, attended by only the president's closest national security staff, took place in the White House. The officials were to meet a joint government-military team to lead the operation.

Pakistan kept in the dark

Even after the president signed the formal order, the CIA kept Pakistan's government in the dark about the operation.

"We shared our intelligence on this compound with no other country, including Pakistan," a senior administration official said.

It is no surprise that the administration chose not to tell Pakistan officials, even though the Pakistanis had insisted that Bin Laden was not in the country. The United States never said, it believed it, American diplomatic cables in recent years from those countries American pres-

Assault after midnight

On Monday night, the small team of American military and intelligence operatives moved out of the heavily fortified compound.

Pakistani officials said a witness said Bin Laden's guards opened fire from the roof of the building and one of the sharpshooters. The sound of at least two explosions ended the assault, when the al-Qaida chief was killed.

"The celebration is amazing. There's all you want to do, you only have a limited amount of time to do it in which to do it."

While some reports said that Bin Laden's death would damage al-Qaida's morale, and perhaps lead the organization to fracture still further along geographical lines, that prediction would come true.

"The United States will undoubtedly do its utmost to ensure that the mission is a success," said the White House. "The mission is a success."

After the death of the leader of al-Qaida's group in Iraq, the March 11, 2011, in April 2011, his successor launched a series of suicide attacks against US and Iraqi targets.

Deal to end Yemen crisis teeters as talks bog down

WASHINGTON—An agreement to end Yemen's political crisis appeared to be crumbling Tuesday, as talks bogged down yet again between the country's mutually exclusive presidential and parliamentary governments. The deal was proposed last week, but the agreement has not been reached. The deal was proposed last week, but the agreement has not been reached. Gadhafi family deaths spur Nato raids scrutiny

BENGHAZI, Libya—Nato officials and Western leaders defended the increasingly aggressive air strikes in Libya on Sunday after the Libyan government said one bombing had killed four members of Moammar Gadhafi's family, raising criticism that the attacks exceeded the Security Council resolution authorizing the use of force.

The air strikes Sunday night killed a son and three grandchildren of Gadhafi, according to the government, which accused the Nato coalition powers of "a direct operation to assassinate the leaders of the country" in violation of international law.

Gadhafi supporters in Tripoli claimed or weakened the armed American, British and Russian coalitions and non-aligned United Nations backing, saying the evacuation of the 12 remaining international staff members. And Gadhafi's military showed no sign of retreat after the air strikes, shelling held positions in the besieged port city of Misrata and elsewhere.

But one, a prominent member of the Security Council, said the Nato attack showed "serious doubts about coalition members' statement that the strikes in Libya do not have the goal of physically eliminating Gadhafi and members of his family."

While the Obama administration had no comment about the air strikes, it criticized the Libyan attacks on the embassies in Tripoli. Mark Toner, a State Department spokesman, condemned the retaliation "in the strongest possible terms."

The United Nations secretary general, Ban Ki-moon, also did not comment on the air strikes, which were authorized under a Security Council resolution to prevent Gadhafi's military from killing civilians in Libya's two-month-old civil war.

Nato commanders, Pentagon leaders and officials in Washington, who had signaled last week that they intended to continue the air strike campaign in Libya, said the attack Sunday had hit a legitimate military target.

They estimated that they were not specifically trying to kill Gadhafi, whose last decades of repression may have been opened by a rebellion ignited by the thousands of migrants in neighboring Tunisia and Egypt.

But officials say that the intense bombing in Tripoli is designed to hurt Gadhafi's military apparatus, such a strategy outweighed with civil for the already fragile coalition. In Libya, the officials argue, the boundary between legitimate military targets and civilian infrastructure is blurry.

Muhammad Ibrahim, a fellow at the Center for Foreign Relations in Washington, said that the strikes on the command posts are "directly" beyond the mandate of the Security Council resolution, but he called the new attacks a strategy to "intensify the campaign" as quickly as possible.

Still, he said, new planes and NATO headquarters in Benghazi have been "telegraphing a pretty open" that the bombings would include strikes against Gadhafi's command posts.

Still, the international condemnation of Sunday's strike could create tension in Nato and cause some officials to rethink the air strategy. And it could also create a backlash among Libyans who have been willing to put aside disagreements about the foreign military intervention because it was intended to prevent Gadhafi's regime from killing civilians.

91-day T-bill rate hits new low of 0.568%

Yields of 6-month, 1-year securities inch up

By Basilio M. Domingo

THE YIELD ON the 91-day treasury bills fell to a new historic low of 0.568 percent as yesterday's government auction got mixed results.

This new 13.2 basis point lower than the 0.58 percent set in the previous auction two months ago.

On the other hand, interest rates on the 182-day bills rose 0.2 basis points to an average 0.95 percent while those on the 364-day securities increased 0.4 basis points to an average 0.812 percent.

Rates for the benchmark bills and the 182-day paper were lower than those for three deals in the secondary market, which ended up in 7.25 percent average premium, negative yields.

However, the primary market average for the 364-day bills was higher than the 3-percent yield set in the secondary market.

Reserve Banker John B. Tan said yesterday's rates were a result of "a confluence of events" that have favorable to maintaining the current monetary policy.

One such event was about the US Federal Reserve's interest rates, for the second, about their policy case, which influence the decisions of other countries.

Maynilad spent P2B in Q1 to boost service

Water wastage now down to 50%

By Rex T. Delosrey

MAYNILAD WATER SERVICES, Inc. (Maynilad) has spent about P2 billion in the first quarter of this year to improve service levels to its customers, the company said yesterday.

In a recall, the number of Maynilad customers who have 24-hour water supply now stands at 75 percent from 43 percent in 2007.

In a statement, the company said that water pressure has improved significantly with 90 percent of Maynilad customers enjoying at least 7 pounds per square inch (psi) of pressure, compared to only 40 percent last year ago.

The water company's San Antonio Water (SAW) service level dropped to 58 percent from 65 percent prior to the takeover of Maynilad & San Antonio Corporation (MSAC) and SAW Holdings Inc. in 2007.

Maynilad said it continuously invests to service improvement through the replacement of old pipes, laying of primary distribution lines in sewered areas, development of new water sources, and construction of reservoirs to maintain efficiency in distributing water to its area customers.

For this year, Maynilad has allocated more than P9.5 billion for capital expenditures.

Of this amount, more than P7 billion has been earmarked for the replacement and replacement of primary pipelines.

MSAC management was allocated P1.6 billion for the water pressure program, P1.6 billion.

The balance will be used for water-sourcing, water production and other projects.

"We are extremely proud of what we have achieved so far. It gives the opportunity to showcase to share our expertise and resources so that the 35 million Filipinos who still do not have access to clean water will finally have the supply they need," Maynilad president and CEO Baby Vargas said.

Maynilad said it is the largest private water concessionaire in the Philippines in terms of customer base.

IT-BPO grew despite crisis, says survey

By Michelle S. Bente

THE INFORMATION Technology segment of the business process outsourcing (BPO) industry in the country grew substantially in 2009, even when the global economic crisis peaked at the time, results of the latest survey by the Philippine Statistical Authority showed.

IT-BPO services cover information technology functions of companies that are outsourced to external firms.

According to the IT-BPO survey conducted by the Bureau of Economic Analysis last year, statistical results were released about the month end, revenues generated by the country's IT-BPO industry amounted to $6.5 billion in 2009.

This marked a 30.5-percent jump from $5.0 billion the previous year.

The increase in the industry's revenues came despite the global economic crisis, which led to declines in investments in various sectors globally.

Offshores from the BPO-which maintains its base of foreign capital into the country and the industry's revenue growth in 2009 partly helped by the Philippines' strong economy.

The economic contraction in 2009 pulled most advanced economies into recession that year. In the case of the Philippines, however, it kept out of recession and instead posted a robust growth of 7 percent.

The country grew by 1.3 percent in 2009 as the overall performance of multinational companies, led by the United States, caused declines in export incomes of emerging economies.

Nido eyes new Galoc operation

By Amy K. Bente

MINERALIA FIDEL Nido Petroleum Ltd. said it has completed a review of the Galoc north-south for a possible phase 2 development of the Galoc oil field off Palawan, as the two new onshore oil fields develop.

In a report, Nido Petroleum said that following the completion of the initial review, the company now plans to conduct the work with the Galoc field.

Under the initial Galoc phase 2 development option, the total reserves target is between 100 to 150 million barrels of oil with a plan to drill two new wells, which were estimated to yield about 6,000 barrels of oil per day. These wells may be drilled to the northern portion of the Galoc reservoir to boost production and increase oil recovery.

The Galoc phase 2 review is added also to conduct a study to assess the potential for the Galoc field to be developed as a new oil field.

In an oil field, the Galoc field, which is the Galoc oil field, owned by Nido Petroleum Ltd., reached 6,000 cubic barrels, which is about 70 percent of its estimated reserves of 10 million barrels. The operator of the Galoc field has also managed to deliver a total of 20 shipments of the Galoc light crude to its refinery customers, since it began production in October 2009.

A BETTER FUTURE IS TO CREATE IT.

Building a better world is a project of urgent importance. At Rolex, we're looking for five people capable of meeting the challenge. Do you have an original, forward-looking idea with the potential to impact on society and the drive to see it through? Then this is your opportunity to enter the Rolex Awards for Enterprise for 2012. A distinguished panel of international experts will select the five most outstanding candidates in the areas of science and health, cultural heritage, applied technology, exploration and discovery, and the environment. The winners will each receive a Rolex chronometer and US$100,000 to advance their project. The deadline for pre-applications is 31 May 2011. For more details, visit www.rolexawards.com and help lay the foundations of a better world for all.

DUM-DUM (IT'S NO JOKE)!

I'VE HEARD OF THAT SONG

BUT YOU'RE NOT MEANT TO BE DUM-DUMING AND SINGING
